We found you in an old boat, Gravy,
two brothers, and none of you named.
Your eyes weren't even open yet —
newlyweds, we raised you all the same.

*Gravy, you met us at the door,
however long we'd been gone before.
No big welcome, not a single sound —
just you, and the whole house settling down.*

You groomed your brothers ear to ear,
you never had much to say.
You'd roam the backyard all afternoon,
then climb in our bed and stay.

*Gravy, you met us at the door,
however long we'd been gone before.
No big welcome, not a single sound —
just you, and the whole house settling down.*

You were ours before the kids came,
before the noise of little feet.
You're a good kitty, you always were.
I hope you're eating all the best treats.

*Gravy, you met us at the door,
however long we'd been gone before.
No big welcome, not a single sound —
you're gone, and the house still settles down.*

Good kitty, that's what we still say,
quiet girl, we're glad you came.
Sleep in, Gravy, sleep all day.
